poetry series news

This is my very first post to the Myopic Books blog. I'm here in my apartment listening to Dengue Fever. Have you heard 'em? Retro wackiness with soupy secret agent guitar noodles and a Cambodian female vocalist who must know karate. I can just tell by the sound of her voice. That's not all I listen to tho. Ok, so tonight in Chicago I'm heading out to Rese's Bierstube for a half-liter or two of whatever's the latest they have on tap. So, when I'm not writing poetry I'm listening to it and hosting the Sunday poetry series at the bookstore. This Sunday two interesting poets will be reading some of their new work.

THIS SUNDAY AT MYOPIC BOOKS

Sunday Dec 17 – Steve Halle & Adam Fieled

Adam FIELED is a poet, critic, and musician. He has released four albums, including two spoken word collections, "Raw Rainy Fog" (Radio Eris Records, 2002) and "Virtual Pinball/Madame Psychosis" (WSG Productions, 2006). He edits the blog-journal PFS Post, and has work in or forthcoming in Jacket, Cordite, Blazevox, Word For/Word, Ocho, MiPOesias, Rain Taxi, Nth Position, Eratio, Dusie, and Melancholias Tremulous Dreadlocks. A magna cum laude graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, he also holds an MFA in poetry from New England College and is a PHD candidate and University Fellow at Temple University in Philly.

Steve HALLE is a poet, teacher and football coach from Palatine, IL, who recently received an MFA in Poetry from New England College, without which he would not have met Adam Fieled. He maintains the blog-journal Seven Corners, which features Chicago's local, semi-local and visiting poets. His poems have appeared in PFS Post, Moria, Alehouse and November 3rd Club. Like many poets, he has an as-of-yet unpublished manuscript called Map of the Hydrogen World, which is currently collecting dust.

See you there?
